KELLOGG PACT TO BE ISSUE IN CAMPAIGN

Treaty Will Revive Old Debate on World Court and League of Nations

BRINGS PARTY WARFARE Democrats Anxious to Diminish G. O. P. Claim for Anti-war Pact Credit

Geneva, (AP)—A resolution for revision of the covenant of the league of nations to bring it in harmony with the Kellogg-Brand pact, rejecting war, was rejected by the league assembly Tuesday. The resolution was presented by Premier Waldemar of Lithuania. The assembly rejected the proposal on the grounds that the Kellogg-Brand pact was not yet in force and that delegations were not empowered to discuss it at present.

Washington.—The Kellogg anti-war treaty is getting into politics and may stay there until the end of the campaign if not longer. And when the December session of congress comes, it probably will be ratified but only after the world court and league of nations fight has been revived and there has been considerable discussion of the Monroe doctrine.

The statements attributed to the Republican management in claiming the anti-war treaty as a Republican achievement have stirred the Democrats. They now want to talk about "reservations" which is precisely the way the league covenant was beaten. And if the notes exchanged between Secretary Kellogg and foreign governments, "interpreting" the treaty as safeguarding the Monroe doctrine are to be considered as binding, which is the claim that will undoubtedly be made by the administration, then the Democrats see no objection to clarifying "reservations" or "interpretations" by the executive branch of the government permitting the other nations of the world to accept the United States in the world court.

REVIVE OLD ISSUE

Charles Evans Hughes, former secretary of state, has just been elected a judge on the world court, having been nominated to that position by many governments, and the friends of the world court have been biding their time in the hope that after 1928 presidential campaign was out of the way they could revive the subject. They now contend that a nation which is willing to renounce war as an instrument of national policy should not object to membership in a tribunal which shall be available to decide disputes if both sides agree to submit to that tribunal.

The debate will hinge on what the real really is of the statements made in the Kellogg notes safeguarding the Monroe doctrine and American interests, the theory being that the United States is not a purely defensive war and so would not attack on American interests outside the United States—a view which Great Britain concurred. Senator Borah of Idaho, a champion of the Kellogg treaty but opposed to the world court, Senator Swanson, Democrat, who is considering seriously whether the interpretations in the Kellogg note are binding, is ranking Democrat on the senate foreign relations committee and leader of the fight for the world court. He now has taken the position that it was useless to bring the world court protocol back to the senate for clarification.

WOULD DISCUSS POINTS

Meanwhile an exchange of notes has been suggested as one way to satisfy the powers that American reservations to the world court protocol attached by the senate will not embarrass the operation of the protocol as between other nations. Switzerland has asked the league of nations for an opinion on some of the very points developed in the American reservations. If there is a will to enter the world court, the system of "interpretations" by notes may make it possible for the rest of the world to accept the senate reservations to the world court protocol as it has been willing to go in interpreting the far-reaching provisions of the anti-war pact. And in the end both may be summarized but not until the campaign is over and the scars of battle are healed.

New York Jeweler Claims He Was Slugged and Bound in Hotel Room

Milwaukee (AP)—Slugged, he said, by two unmasked men who bound and bagged him, David Zimmern, president of David Zimmern, Jewellers, New York, was robbed of jewels valued at more than $125,000 late Monday afternoon in his suite on the sixteenth floor of the Schroeder hotel.

The bandits left the jeweler tied to the lavatory of his bathroom with picture wire after taking the stones, most of which were unset diamonds, from a leather belt he wore beneath his shirt. He was found in a semi-conscious condition by hotel employees who broke open the door leading to his bath room.

The robbers gained admittance to Zimmern's suite by following the jeweler, who had returned to his room to transfer the goods from his belt to a leather case, he said. It is believed that they waited in the inner hallway for the merchant, and as soon as he had unlocked his door they shoved him into the room and slugged him.

14TH BOMB IS SET OFF IN KENOSHA STRIKE WAR

Kenosha (AP)—After a silence of five days, dynamite roared again Monday night in Kenosha, and Alfred Gemmell, employee of the Wisconsin Gas and Electric company, probably owes his life to the pineapple gang's error in building the bomb too thick to be fully effective. Gemmell's brother, William, who lives at his home, is now employed as a knitter at the Allen-A plant. William, a younger brother and their mother, all preparing to retire as the blast occurred, were unhurt.

WASHINGTON FULL OF FLAGS WAVING DAILY IN BREEZE

Colors Are Always Visible—Except When Flag Poles Are Painted

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Washington—The "Little Old Red School House" of the song has nothing on Washington when it comes to flying the Stars and Stripes.

Aside from the glorious trees, criss-crossing the city with green in summer as seen from any high place like the Washington Monument tourist observation tower, the most notable prospect of the capital is the wealth of streaming bunting waving above the government buildings. The flag is in sight wherever you look between sunrise and sunset. Every government owned or occupied structure, however big or small, from the massive bulk of the Capitol itself, standing in aloft majesty on its garden hill, to the least of the rented buildings, were a corps of government clerks toil has at least one showing and the big departments two or more. Rain or shine, they are always there—except once in a very long while.

WHAT! NO FLAGS?
One of the exceptions came just recently. It involved the huge State, War, Navy building, as it is still known, although inhabited nowadays only by the state and war departments, the navy having moved out to a "semi-permanent" factory-like structure on the Mall in crowded war days. It's a mighty building, standing four-square in sunken gardens and of the same architecture on each of its four street facings. It flies four flags, one in the center of each front, fluttering above the peaked jumble of the roof. This day it flew none.

Sharp eyes in the taller business structures away across Lafayette Square in the business heart of the city, are accustomed to those fluttering flags. They give quick notice to the world of mourning when they drop to half-staff at the death of some important figure in public life. And Captain Sherby Hopkins, who knows his Washington from years of contacts as legal adviser to scores of Latin-American governments, near governments and just plain ordinary revolutionists, was quick to notice that the emblems of freedom were missing.

"What's the matter up there?" he demanded over the telephone. "There's not a flag flying on the building. Is everybody dead?" The answer was simple. The flag poles were being painted, that was all; but it only happens once in half a decade or so and a lot more folks than the captain were worried and inquired.

TIME BALL STILL DROPS
One of the poles, on the east front facing the White House, still carries the time ball, dropped at noon on electric contact from the Naval Observatory, America's only official correct time factory. Time was when the streets from which the ball was visible became congested with folks, watch in hand, just before noon daily, all waiting to check up on and correct the pocket time-pieces. But that day is long past with electric clocks hanging out observatory time everywhere and the radio distributing this essential government product free, tick by tick, every day and night. Nobody watches the time ball any more, although it drops every day.

Coming back to the flags, there are just two of Washington official color showings that have special significance. Those are the flags above the White House itself and on the house and senate chambers. The White House flies the national colors only when the President is in residence. It is missing all summer when he's away vacationing. The senate and house flags fly only when the two bodies are in session. At other times only the flags in the center of the east and west fronts, under shadow of the dome, are displayed.

A car owned and driven by Clifford Rickenbacker, Y. M. C. Rickenbacker was driving west on Second-st and did not see the train blocking the street until it was too late to stop and he swerved sharply and ran up the track. The front axle and one wheel were damaged.

STATE RECEIVES FIRST SHIPMENT OF NEW LICENSES

1929 Plates Are Green With White Figures — 2,000 Now Available

Madison—(AP)—The first shipment of the fresh, green automobile licenses that are to adorn fenders, tail lights, radiators and bumpers this winter have been received by the automobile license division of the secretary of state's office.

The new license tags are green with white figures. About two thousand of them are now available and ready for distribution when the rush starts Dec. 15. On that date the first licenses go out from the division, and the newspapers rush to find who got license number one. The tags come to the secretary of state's auto department in several bunches, a few thousand at a time, throughout the licensing period, and until the end of March each year. Thus, the state prison tag factory spreads its work over a longer period, and the licenses are available as needed in the division office and are not piled high awaiting takers. With the first sale of licenses the work of Mrs. Hazel Otto in the secretary of state's office increases with the work of the auto license division. You can't get a license in the state capitol. That's the cause of Mrs. Otto's worry. Scores of people come to her desk each day to ask for licenses or to straighten out license matters. She can do nothing for them except direct them to the license division, two blocks from the capitol building. The license division occupies a long, flat two story building covering about a quarter of a block at 16 East Doty Street. Almost every one knows, or finds out, that the licensing of autos in Wisconsin, as in many other states, is in the hands of the secretary of state. So many come to that office in the capitol. Mrs. Otto gets most of them. She is private secretary to Theodore Damman, the state department head. Each one of the visitors, generally from out of town, must be directed to the license office. It is no easy task for the visitor to find his way out of the capitol, let alone through Madison's diagonal streets, so Mrs. Otto manages to keep busy, thank you, during the winter months. She sometimes gives up and sends the ones who appear to be entirely confused to a Capitol police officer on the main floor of the building. With the aid of a city map and sometimes gestulation he generally gets the licensee-to-be on his way. Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Cooney are spending several days in Chicago.

TOURIST TRAFFIC REMAINED NORMAL DESPITE COOLIDGE

Answer Is Yes and No to Question of Whether Brule
Was Drawing Card

Superior—(P)—As the end of President Coolidge's stay in the north woods draws to a close, the question frequently asked of summer resort owners and business men at the head of the lakes is whether the Summer White House was as great a drawing card as expected.

The answer usually is "Yes and No."

A fury of activity followed the news that the president has chosen Cedar Island lodge for his vacation. Refreshment stands sprang up like mushrooms in the vicinity of the Brule, stores were loaded down with souvenirs, prodigious amounts of paint were applied, and resorts strained facilities to be ready to accommodate as many as possible.

Then every one sat back and waited. The president and his party arrived from the north and stayed for three weeks and the first bit of sunshine found a bedraggled and forlorn group on the red side of the ledger. But the best part of July and all of August was ahead, and the flood had not entirely quenched the flame hope.

Came beautiful weather, but not many tourists. A few trickled in, journeying down to the unexciting entrance to the lodge, and then went their way. As the days grew into weeks, the visitors increased somewhat but the number was still below the customary mark. It was not until the latter part of August that it was seen the number of tourists would surpass the figure of the preceding year.

Related business came too late, however, for it found many of the stands and temporary stores closed up, owners discouraged and gone.

Many had planned their vacations before the announcement that Coolidge was to go to Wisconsin. Then too many of those who had included the Superior region in their itinerary may have changed their route to avoid possibility of heavy traffic, due to the Summer White House.

Bolstered by the reports from the Black Hills, that traffic there this year had greatly exceeded that of last, when President Coolidge was there, the merchants are looking forward to next summer.

The Minnesota Arrowhead country, adjoining that of the Brule region, reported it expected the number of tourists in the Arrowhead country to surpass by 45,000 that of last year, when the total reached 207,000 and approximately $4,000,000 was spent. Tourists have registered in the region from every state in the union and from every province in Canada, as well as several foreign countries. Passenger traffic on the lake boats is surpassing that of 1927, which indicated that a new record will be established before the end of the season.

At Superior tourist traffic was reported unusually heavy from July 10 to August 30. The Wisconsin highway commission's booth on "Bel knap street, on the way to Cedar Island Lodge checked 1,076 cars with outstate licenses who stopped for information, and 305 Wisconsin cars. Thirty-three states and five Canadian provinces were represented in the number.

School Board Meets

COP SHOTS DOG; OWNER SEEKS $50

Holds Shooting Was Unnecessary in Claim Presented Against City

The judiciary committee of the common council now has under consideration a $50 claim filed against the city by Frederick Krause, 126 S. Telulah-ave, for the death of a dog he alleges was unnecessarily shot about a month ago by a motorcycle officer.

The shooting took place as the officer rode by the Krause residence on his motorcycle, according to Krause. The dog, a hound, had been tied up for several weeks, and when freed, naturally was rather frisky, the claimant alleges.

As the motorcycle officer was going by, the animal chased the machine, and the officer looked at the dog, which snapped at the rider, according to Krause's story. The officer then drew out his gun, shot the animal which, wounded, ran away to a nearby field.

The owner says he found the dog a few hours later, and hoping that he might save its life, nursed it until it died about 30 hours later.

Flowers Need Plenty Of Light, Water, Warmth

Madison—(P)—Though man must submit to nature's dictum of bleak outdoors during the winter, inside his own home he rules supreme, and can create his own glorious spring and summer through the raising of flowers and potted plants.

So exults James C. Moore, horticulturist of the state college of agriculture, in a bulletin describing the most effective methods to be used in propagation of flowers in winter months.

Two chief drawbacks in growing plants in the house are too dry atmosphere and too high temperature. Mr. Moore says. The problem of too dry atmosphere is increased when houses are furnace heated. When grown under ordinary residence conditions, there is no danger of getting the atmosphere too moist.

Most house plants do best at a temperature below that to which homes are heated, according to Mr. Moore. He considers the best temperature to be between 60 and 65 degrees.

Regularity in watering the plants, and providing them with sufficient amounts of water are emphasized by the horticulturist.

"Probably as good a general indication as any of the need for water is a hollow sound when the pot is tapped on the side. When one is not sufficiently experienced to tell by this method, the plant may be slipped out of the pot for a few times when making the test as a means of checking on your judgment of the need for water. A change of the soil color from dark to light also indicates lack of moisture."

Plants need a bath occasionally, he says. Most home florists find sponging of the foliage better than spraying, even though it requires more labor. He advocates use of a soft cloth or sponge, handling the foliage as carefully as possible.

Another problem is that of sufficient light. To grow plants satisfactorily, one must know something about their light requirements, and then try to give them proper amounts.

"In general," he says, "flowering plants require more sunlight than foliage plants. Some plants, as ferns, do best if not exposed to direct sunlight, especially if it is bright. Those who do not possess sunny east, west or south windows will usually do better with foliage plants."

MUNICIPAL BATH HOUSES TO CLOSE SATURDAY NIGHT

Season Marks Most Successful One Since Erection of Buildings

Neenah—After the most successful season since its establishment, the municipal bath houses located at the waterworks station will close Saturday evening for the season. The attendance during the months of June, July, August and September totaled more than 25,000 men, women and children. The summer month was August when the attendance, according to Leonard Bradie, caretaker, totaled more than 10,000. During the last few weeks, the attendance was greater in the afternoon. Arrangements will be made by the council committee on parks and public buildings for the establishment of the bath system at the two bath-houses next year. To finance this project a sum will be recommended for the next city. At present there are but 30 rooms in the men's bath-house and 25 rooms in the women's house. This is far too small to accommodate the large crowds which go there on extremely hot days and evenings. The largest daily attendance totaled 800 people.

ELECTION WON'T SETTLE PROHIBITION

The Chicago Tribune, wettest of wet newspapers, has this to say on the subject of "prohibition in the campaign," after discussing the positions of the presidential candidates on the subject:

We think it obvious, therefore, that whatever the conviction or opinion of the citizen may be as to the expediency of prohibition, as to principle or as to policy, the differences in the declaration of Mr. Smith and Mr. Hoover cannot settle the question by the result of this campaign. There are immediate issues vital to national existence, and it is upon them and not upon a general sentiment for or against the prohibition experiment that this election will be determined.

This is exactly what the Post-Crescent has maintained from the beginning. The election of either Smith or Hoover will not settle anything so far as prohibition goes. It is a congressional and not a presidential issue. Furthermore, it would be a serious mistake for the United States to elect a president because of his views on prohibition. The qualifications for president in other respects are of so much deeper concern, that no more questions of national policy are of so much deeper concern, that no more deplorable precedent could be set than to put in the White house a man because he favors or is opposed to the eighteenth amendment.

Whether the election will be determined, as the Tribune appears to believe, upon other matters than general sentiment for or against prohibition is, however, another thing. Undoubtedly in some states prohibition will be the controlling fact. If Wisconsin goes for Smith, for instance, it will be because it is wet and for no other reason.

It seems probable, however, that the further the campaign progresses the less prohibition will be an issue. The first flare-up of the country was distinctly along this line, but months of reflection will have its effect in convincing many thinking persons of the fallacy of injecting this controversy into the election of president.

FRANCO-BRITISH DIPLOMACY

The old pre-war habits of secret diplomacy and mysterious international "understanding" seem to have too firm a grip on some European chancelleries to be shaken off.

A case in point is the much-discussed "naval entente" between England and France.

All that is known of this agreement is that the British and French officials have let fall—disconnected hints, capable of varying interpretations. It is only natural, therefore, that some other nations should be growing suspicious and should find in this new entente, not a step toward armament reduction, but a new alliance that may lead toward anything but peace.

That is the chief trouble with secret diplomacy. If this Franco-British understanding is the innocuous, virtuous agreement its sponsors say it is, let them publish the full text. If they do not they have only themselves to blame if other nations misinterpret it and suspect.

"BEST SELLERS" IMPROVE

It wasn't so very many years ago that a book which qualified as a "best seller" was practically certain to be a book of very little worth from any literary or social point of view. Indeed, the expression "best seller" was almost a term of reproach; when one used it one generally had in mind a frothy, airy sort of book that would be forgotten a year later.

Times have changed, however, and the most recent publishers' reports indicate it graphically.

The best selling novel continues to be the very excellent "Bridge of San Luis Rey." It is followed in second place by the equally meritorious "Swan Song." In the non-fiction field, Maurois' "Disraeli" heads the list, with Shaw's "Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism" close behind it.

No longer must a book be trashy to gain a wide audience. The public's capacity to appreciate and enjoy the best is, apparently, considerably greater than some people have been telling us.

KEEP TREATY OUT OF POLITICS

Secretary Kellogg returning home from Paris where the multi-lateral peace treaty was signed, warns Republicans not to make a campaign issue of the treaty nor to take credit for it in a party sense. The statement follows a speech by Mr. Hoover in which the latter praised the Republican party for its promotion of international peace since the war, particularly mentioning as the three outstanding world contributions to this cause the Washington arms conference, settlement of reparations and the Kellogg-Briand treaty renouncing war.

There are more reasons than one why Mr. Hoover and Republican leaders should treat with modesty the party record on peace measures. The first is, as Mr. Kellogg points out, that foreign policy ought not to be involved in party politics. One of the weaknesses of our foreign policy is a lack of continuity and the making of it a partisan controversy in the senate. The secretary of state rightly deprecates this tendency. The second reason is that whatever affirmative record there is belongs as much to the Democrats as to Republicans, and that the record itself might be a great deal better than Mr. Hoover has tried to make it appear.

Our attitude toward the League of Nations has been politically disgraceful. Not that we did not see fit to join the League, but that the Harding administration did all it could to break down, ridicule and discredit an organization which is almost solely responsible for open diplomacy, peace developments and the prospect of peace in Europe: an organization, furthermore which has done a monumental work for the rehabilitation of war stricken countries and for their social and political advancement. Finding that they could not destroy the League, Republican leaders have gradually ameliorated their policy of isolation and denunciation until today we find them forced to write in the Kansas City platform a plank pledging cooperation with the League.

Our record with regard to the World court is even more compromising. Republican politicians have made a football of this great institution and so frightened President Coolidge with their gestures and trickery that he has abandoned the proposal for American adherence. Finally, the idea of outlawing war by formal renunciation did not come from the United States, but from France. Republican foreign policy in Europe since the war is nothing to boast of. What there is of it has largely been forced upon the two administrations by events beyond their control, but it is in its failures rather than its performances that it is most vulnerable.

800 CIGARETS APIECE

Records of the International Revenue Department reveal that the American people in the past year smoked the astounding number of 100,000,000,000 cigarettes—more than 800 apiece.

That seems like a pretty enormous number of cigarettes. At first glance one would think that the number must be away too high. But on examination it becomes more reasonable.

Figure it out. The average confirmed cigarette smoker consumes about a package a day—20 cigarettes. Multiplied by 365, this becomes 7300 cigarettes a year. Divide 100 billion by this figure and you get not quite 13,700,000 as the number of steady cigarette smokers in the land.

And that, out of a total population of 120,000,000, isn't so bad.

City folk usually have this experience with missing baby chicks: fifty per cent die; fifty per cent turn out to be roosters, and the rest are hens.

MAY WE NOT ABATE A JOT OR TITTLE

What can we do, asks a Michigan correspondent, when a doctor in our state university writes such trash as this (See enclosed clipping). The item tells first how little we know about colds, then assures the newspaper reader that "it is pretty well established, however, that what we technically call local chilling of the body does in some way or other contribute to the development of colds." The item goes on to say that "for that reason the draft which strikes on the back of the neck or in the case of a person who is hot, sitting down in a draft, results in too rapid chilling of the body, tending to the development of colds. Low resistance or other conditions favor this development." Then, further along, the item informs the public that if one drives a car with the windshield open, so that the air comes straight into the car, conditions then would make for the development of colds.

Quite a lot of information, in view of the fact that we really know so little about colds.

But I can't tell the Michigan correspondent what to do about it. You pay your money and take your choice.

A New Jersey correspondent writes:

"I have benefited not a little by your teachings. I heartily endorse your views on the subject of drafts and their harmlessness. But this goes only as far as colds. I know that drafts do not cause colds. But they do cause a sharp ache running from the back of the neck down to my shoulder blades. My mother calls this a stiff neck and declares one gets it if one sits in front of an electric fan. Here is my experience. I had never had a stiff neck before in my life. One hot night I couldn't sleep and lay on the bed stripped to the waist for an hour, with a large electric fan on the chair beside the bed blowing upon my back. This put me to sleep within a few minutes. Next morning I awoke with the sharp ache described. An aunt of mine had this same condition before. She consulted a physician and the first question he asked was whether she used an electric fan. She did. He advised her to avoid it. She followed the advice and her stiff neck disappeared, that is, the stiffness disappeared. Will you kindly explain this?"

In order to explain I must seem to abate my position one little jot or tittle. I agree with the opinion that a draft or wind or sudden chilling when one is warmed up by vigorous exercise is likely to cause stiffness, soreness or lameness. In fact I have never knowingly questioned that. I do condemn as indefensible the slovenly habit of calling such lameness or soreness a "cold." And I am not quibbling about mere terms. I condemn the sly attempt of the University of Michigan health service writer or all other health propagandists or medical writers who would seize upon this fact as a sort of support for their unimpeachable theory of "lowered resistance" and the alleged influence of chilling of the body in the development of respiratory diseases. With no desire to gain anything other than revelation of the truth I challenge any authorized representative of the medical or health propaganda who exploits this idea to debate the question with me publicly. Surely either they are wrong or I am wrong, and the wrong party ought to be squelched and suppressed before any more harm is done.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Humidity and Health

It is unhealthy to sleep in a damp room, on the ground floor with no cellar, but a sound water-proof floor, provided the room has ample light and ventilation, though little direct sun. Is mere dampness unhealthy? (P. A.)

Answer—I think not, though I believe many physicians still ascribe ill such as "rheumatism" to such dampness—whatever "rheumatism" may be. The lack of direct sunlight is of course not healthful, for direct sunlight carries something essential for health, life and growth, something akin to the hypothetical "vitamins." But mere dampness, humidity, is in itself not injurious to health.

Keep Everything Out of Your Ears

Is it injurious to put sweet oil in ears to relieve itching? After a cold in my head one of my ears aches and swells and seems to relieve it. Would you suggest some other remedy? (P. MCP.)

Answer—As a general rule oil should not be used in the ears, because it tends to leave a hardened, irritating residue. You might use some warm glycerin instead.

Roaches Have Relined

Two months ago I asked you how to get rid of cockroaches and promised to write and thank you if your advice was good. It took several weeks, but now we never see one about the place and I feel a wonderful relief for which we thank you very much. (H. C. C.)

HASKIN WRITES TODAY

HISTORIC BUILDINGS THREATENED

Washington, D. C. — Word has reached Washington that an edifice of exceptional historical interest to Americans is threatened with demolition. It is the original Quaker meeting house at the town of Jordans in Buckinghamshire, England, which was attended by William Penn. This Seventeenth Century building stands at the end of a lane. It appears that this lane is to be extended an improved to make an arterial as a part of a general road building scheme on which the authorities have embarked. As the lane at present ends at the door of the Quaker meeting house, the building is to be demolished to make way for the extension.

Some little publicity has been given the imminent removal of the building in England but only in the past few days has word reached this country. It is thought possible that some organization will be formed to take charge of the building and provide for its removal intact to an adjacent site rather than permit destruction of so historic an edifice.

The ancestral home of the Washingtons was taken over in such a way. Sulgrave Manor in England was threatened with destruction when the Sulgrave Manor Foundation was organized by patriotic Americans and a fund raised to save the old manor house which had been built by Lawrence Washington. It now stands in its spacious grounds, restored to its original condition. It is used as a sort of museum for Washington relics and actually is visited by many Americans as well as by Englishmen.

It is a rather notable fact that Europeans, especially the English and French, take a greater interest in the preservation of buildings rich in historical association than do Americans. The British and French Governments both make substantial appropriations for the preservation of interesting relics and government commissions are charged with the responsibility of seeing to it that structures which have been used in connection with the development of the national history are kept intact for the educational and sentimental benefit of posterity. No such hand in saving old landmarks is taken by the United States.

For example, the Government had no part whatever in preserving what may be regarded as America's most sacred shrine; that is, Mount Vernon, the historic home of George Washington. It remained for a private and voluntary organization, the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, to acquire the property and maintain it. To the end that the old mansion and grounds may have adequate care, it is necessary for the organization to make a charge for admission.

And it must be remembered that even the Washington Monument at the National Capital was not originally a government project. Here again, a private, voluntary organization undertook the work of commemorating the Father of His Country by erection of the imposing shaft. It was not until the year 1846 that the monument was carried on for some years and resources sank low that the Congress came forward with an appropriation.

The birthplace of Theodore Roosevelt in New York City has been preserved by a private organization and Abraham Lincoln's log cabin birthplace has been enshrined within a stately marble monument, but the outstanding fact in connection with these works is that private initiative rather than government action has been responsible.

Because no official body exists to be on the alert to prevent the passage of historic structures, some of the most interesting of such buildings have been lost to American posterity. The Francis Scott Key house, for example, a pleasing brick building in the colonial manner, which stood in Georgetown, the older section of Washington, was razed. True, from its site sprang the District of Columbia end of the Key Memorial Bridge, but the actual dwelling of the composer of the Star Spangled Banner was lost.

Similarly, the Washington residence of Daniel Webster, a graceful building of Lafayette Square, across Pennsylvania from the White House was razed without a murmur being heard and its site utilized for a modern office building. Likewise, the fine old houses built by John Jay, who was private secretary to President Lincoln and himself Secretary of State, and of Henry Adams, a member of the celebrated Massachusetts family which furnished two Presidents, were torn down to make room for a modern hotel.

MAKE WAY FOR MODERN BUILDINGS

In fact the whole character of Washington's most historic square, has been altered by the sacrifice of old houses, rich in historical associations, to the erection of new buildings devoted to commercial use.

There are some notable exceptions. One of the more interesting concerns the residence known as the Warbler House. It was not nearly so old a building as some of the others mentioned but had a special interest as being the finest example of the work of the celebrated architect, Richardson, extant. Richardson is regarded as the first American architect to create a purely American style of design. He became highly successful and famous not only in this country but left a certain impress on European architecture, many examples of his work standing abroad.

When the site of the Warbler house was purchased for a huge

DAILY HEALTH HINTS

FRESH AIR HAS HELPFUL EFFECT ON WHOLE BODY

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

In an exceedingly valuable and up-to-date manual for the tuberculosis called "Rules for Recovery from Tuberculosis," Dr. Lawrason Brown considers the various questions related to climate and fresh air.

The fresh air treatment for tuberculosis was developed in the last half of the nineteenth century. It is now being realized that the fresh air is taken not primarily for the lungs, but for its general effect on the whole body.

KEEPING OUTDOORS

Doctor Brown is not convinced that sleeping outdoors materially hastens recovery, provided a patient can get a good night's sleep. He suggests that the patient, preferably during the daylight, are spent in the open air and the night passed in a well ventilated room.

On the other hand, when a person works all day indoors, sleeping outdoors at night may be considered as a necessity. A man outdoors gets 100 times more fresh air than he could get in the best ventilated room in any given period of time.

During the summer windows are kept open, fresh air is everywhere and patients with all sorts of diseases do well. With the first breath of autumn, however, windows are closed, except for brief daily airmings.

The patients do fairly well until about Christmas, when confinement indoors begins to tell. By the following spring, patients with tuberculosis particularly begin to languish down.

MANY DEVICES

All sorts of window tents, sleeping porches, verandas, sleeping chairs and similar apparatus have been devised to enable the person who requires much fresh air to get it easily.

Because of the associated climatic conditions, the fresh air treatment, as any other is best taken under the advice of some one who has given special study to the matter.

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York — Notes from a recent vacation: They call New York hard, heartless city. Oh, very well! We were all sitting about the rough table of a fishing camp. . . . Something like 50 miles from the beaten of the beaten path. . . . The sort of country where, one would assume, the sheer loneliness of the surroundings would engender a kinship among all living things. . . . And we fell to talking about the quaint characters of the "far away" spots.

No matter how far away the place or how scattered the community, there is generally one "lonely fellow," concerning whom legends have risen. . . . And here, in the heart of the Kawana Lake belt, they began to tell of "Red."

"He ain't very right mentally," the narrator was saying. "There was three boys and they all left home. Their mother was cruel to 'em, so they say. Two of 'em went all right, took farms and settled down. But Red wasn't very right. He just went drifting around doing chores. That fellow never had a roof to his head. No one knows how he sleeps, or how he eats. He hangs around the fire rangers' station. You can generally find him there or at the crossroads post office. They're 12 miles apart. He reads a lot and, the funny thing is, when he wants to be can talk first rate. But they all say he's simple, and the folks are always playing tricks on him. They're always pranking him somehow or other.

"You never can tell where he'll show up. The places here are miles apart, you know. Well, in the heart of winter with the thermometer at 20 below, Red will show up looking for work. God knows where he's been sleeping, or how he's been eating. He generally looks as though he had been eating. So they'll take him in and give him a lot of work to do. It's work they'd have to pay a lot of money as much as $10 for. And they'll take Red and make him do all the work.

Well, last winter one of the farmers kept Red working for four days. Hard work too. And when it was over they gave Red 50 cents and shoved him out into the snow. A blizzard was blowing, too. It was terrible weather. Red needed money to eat, seemed like. But that's the way they do with him. He does a regular man's work and, because it's winter, they always take advantage of him, give him four bits and shove him out."

I began to wonder about Red. I wonder now just how bitter he is about mankind. I wonder what he reads.

And I wonder, just a bit, about those very people, who talk of New York as the "hard-hearted, wicked city." Oh, very well!

Nor have the fictions of the "north woods" begun to use the "Red" material that waits there for them.

There is, for instance, one Pierre La Flamme—shades of Robert Service, what a name! Pierre raises wolves in the country where the "Hudson Bay trading Legions." I first ran across him a year ago, or so, when he brought a wolf team into Manhattan and put it in a "dog" race on the Madison Square Garden ice rink. The Manhattan "Press" was trying to get on "pet" the wolves, and all but gave Pierre nervous prostration. He would keep shouting to them to take their fingers away.

Well, it seemed there was a cute little Parisian maid—frills, fluffs, rouge and all the rest. The war brought great tragedy upon her family. A couple of brothers and a sister lost their lives. She fled the gaiety of Paris and started to "run away from it all." She got as far as Montreal.

There, by accident, she met Pierre, with his great beard, his iron body, his woodsman's walk, his suggestion of the out-of-doors. Pierre, the wolf tamer, married the French girl and took her to his cabin. In this lonely spot they live today—the French girl still keeps her mirror and, so you hear from the natives, still "pretties herself all up" in a land where vanity means less than nothing.

The movie has carte blanche to use this skeletonized scenario if and when they please. As for myself, looking out at the skyline of New York, I find myself wondering about the damoiselle who carried the Paris boulevard into the life of the primitive wolf tamer.

She resolves not to be jealous, but a second blow to her pride comes when she accidentally discovers one of her bridesmaids ask another if she thought the bride liked being second choice.

The pain in her heart vanishes when Rod tells her how much he loves her. They spend an ideal honeymoon and Bertie Lou forgets about Lila until they return and find her playing dictator in their apartment because she "knows what Rod likes."

Too much hospitality in the new home upsets their financial budget. This worries Bertie Lou as does the persistent annoyance of Lila. So she is happy when Rod accepts a position in New York with TOM FRASER.

Anxious to make a good impression, they go to an expensive hotel until they can find an apartment. The cost of things amazes Bertie Lou and she is embarrassed when MOLLY FRASER urges her to buy more clothes than she can afford. She is also worried at Rod's playing poker with Tom. After winning some high stakes, he foolishly invites the crowd to a night club. Bertie Lou buys a new evening dress and charges it against Rod's wishes. Lila arrives in time for the affair and Molly Fraser arranges to throw Rod and Lila together as much as possible. The night club party lasts till dawn and Rod is presented with a check for more than $100 and he has only $70 with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV

Bertie Lou could not see the check as it lay before Rod but she knew that something was wrong of course. Rod fumbled with the piece of paper with its distressing figures, put it down, reached uncertainly for his billfold and then withdrew his hand from his inside coat pocket, empty.

Molly chirped impatiently: "Well, aren't we ever going to leave?"

Something had to be done about it. Plainly, Rod hadn't yet formulated an idea. "What's the matter?" Bertie Lou said and leaned over the table to reach for the check which he had dropped. He tried to stop her from her purpose but she had it.

One quick glance at its terrifying contents and she laughed, a rippling little expression of consternation. "Oh, dear," she said, "I forgot to give you the money I got from the bank today, didn't I. I'm sorry, honey, because now you'll have to ask Tom to lend you some."

Mr. Loree tore his gaze away from Lila's pretty, eager countenance and looked across at Bertie Lou. Her voice had been distinct. "Let me in on this," he pleaded. "I'd rather like to make it my party, if you don't mind." Enjoyed it immensely.

Tom was half awake now. "Non-sense," he mumbled, hardly knowing what it was all about. "No, indeed," Rod refused. "I'm obliged to make a loan, however. It seems we left the money on the piano." He laughed. "Let me have a fifty, Tom."

Tom drew out the amount and added five for half the tip. "Leave ten," he suggested, half fearing that Rod would probably underestimate the importance of generously satisfying the waiter.

Chances were he wouldn't know the amount expected to make him contented. As a matter of fact $10 was the minimum for a hundred plus check. Surreptitiously, Tom took care of the captain. Rod might never come again but he was sure he could. Liked the place. And good jokes weren't to be held for "tight-wads."

Bertie Lou was pleased when they reached the street to learn that Mr. Loree had his car there and would drive Lila home. There was room for two more, he said, looking questionably at them. Molly jumped at the chance. The car was a sumptuous cabriolet, an odd car for a man's use. Its rear seat would accommodate two and there were two drop seats.

Bertie Lou was perfectly willing to go home alone with Rod in a taxicab. As a matter of fact she had been groping about in her mind the last five minutes for a plausible reason to avoid going to the Fraser apartment. Tom had said something about bacon and eggs but the thought of food sickened her.

Lila could have choked Molly for her impetuous acceptance of Mr. Loree's courtesy. At least she might have had sense enough to realize that he offered them room in his car merely as a gesture born of good breeding, she thought angrily.

As Loree's car drove off and Rod turned to look for a taxicab Bertie Lou's mask of sociability fell off.

She hadn't approved of the party in the first place. Rod was well aware of that even if she hadn't said much about it. And he'd been sorry he got into it the instant Molly had asked him to postpone it until Lila's arrival.

But hang it all, how was a fellow to know what these night clubs were like? At the most he'd thought $30 or $40 would be plenty.

Rod tried to fortify himself with righteous indignation against a false world and a misunderstanding wife. But really, inwardly he quaked. A hundred and sixteen dollars! And that money not here from Wayville yet and Bertie Lou wanting so many things.

"What makes me mad," Bertie Lou burst out, "is that Lila can come here and see the very show I've been dying to see but couldn't because we can't afford to spend the money for the tickets. And then you take her out to a night club and blow in enough money to buy me an electric refrigerator or velvet draper or a really good rug or a decent winter coat and I had to coax like an irrelevant, immaterial and . . . and . . ."

"Never mind the rest of it," Rod interrupted. "I think I know what you mean. But you didn't have to coax very hard for anything," he added stiffly.

He thought he'd been very liberal toward her. Hadn't she had everything her own way? Her next remark served as an answer to that and made him feel penitent.

"You see what your poker playing did," she said. "It got you into all this mess. If you'd done as I begged you we wouldn't be out over a hundred dollars."

"Oh gee," Rod pleaded. "You don't want me to be cheap, do you Ebs? Tom's done a lot for us. We owed him and Molly a good time. It wasn't anything out of our pocket to spend the money I won at poker on them."

"Yes, but you didn't win $116! Nothing like it. But of course if you can't see what gambling leads to . . ."

Rod groaned. "Gambling! A little friendly game!"

"Well, you were playing for real money, weren't you? And you can see what happened."

"You weren't any wiser than I was," Rod said defensively. "Don't tell me you wouldn't have detoured us to a movie if you'd know what the Arabesque was going to nick us for."

"I might have found some entertainment to fit a bookkeeper's income," Bertie Lou returned. It was the first belittling reference to Rod's position that she'd ever made. It stirred him to a touch of anger again.

"I don't know that I can't afford a real party once in a lifetime," he replied warmly. "And it won't cost you anything. Go ahead and charge everything you want to."

He was stung because she called him a bookkeeper when he felt very proud of having reached the dignity of an accountant's estate. The Wayville paper had carried quite a story about it. A whole column on the front page. It had made Rod feel like a general, to say the least, in the battlefield of business. And now Bertie Lou spoke of him as a buck private.

"Oh, you're just trying to make me feel extravagant and selfish," she sneered, "your own wild spending," she flamed back at him. "And I haven't done anything more than buy a dress I could have got along without if you hadn't tried to make Rockefeller look like a flop-house bum."

"For Pete's sake don't be a bar nacle and stick forever to one idea," Rod begged. "I've told you I didn't know what a sucker I was making out of myself when I sprang that night club racket. Can't you add it up to experience and call it a day?"

Bertie Lou closed her lips in resentful silence. It was certainly unfair of Rod to try to make her appear as a nagging fault finder when she really had something to complain about, she thought bitterly.

And that "it won't cost you anything" smarted her sensitive pride. It was a reminder that Rod's money was his own. And Bertie Lou had nourished the thought that their marriage would be one of those fifty-fifty affairs in every way.

She drew away from him and sat stiffly upright in the far corner of the cab. It was the first time since it was the first time sincebbh 00 the cab. It was the first time since their marriage that Rod had said anything to hurt her. Hurt her, that is, in the way you are hurt when a cherished illusion is suddenly destroyed. Bertie Lou had not believed she never would quarrel

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby; however harmless they may be to grownups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful or restless, Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

with Rod, but she had hoped they could at least postpone the inevitable for a long, long time.

And here they were, just a few months after their wedding day, the minister's words still fresh in their memories saying "bitter things to each other. The sensation that came to Bertie Lou was new to her. Her throat became tight and painful and a strange feeling as of a warm flood released in the region of her heart caused her real physical anguish. It was as though her heart had burst. Perhaps she was going to die of heart trouble!

It would serve Rod right. After she'd got him out of a pretty mess, too. Scared to death because he hadn't enough money to pay that check. His ingratitude bit deep and a chingly into Bertie Lou's soul. But the thing that went deeper still was Rod's going to sleep on their quarrel. Actually falling asleep, while Bertie Lou blinked her eyes fast in the dark and wondered if he really loved her after all. Lila had been stunning, as usual. Even dazzling in orange velvet and rhinestone-covered slippers. And Rod had enjoyed dancing with her. Anyone could see that.

25,000 STUDENTS ENROLLED IN U. W. EXTENSION CLASSES

Marshall Graf Tells Lions How State School Offers Educational Opportunity

The purpose of the University of Wisconsin's extension service is to extend the campus of the state university to coincide with the boundaries of the state, Marshall Graf, field agent for the extension division, told Appleton Lions club Monday noon.

More than 25,000 persons are taking correspondence courses of the university, Mr. Graf said. The university is offering 500 courses from highly technical subjects to matters that can be understood and appreciated by persons with meagre formal educations.

Mr. Graf devoted considerable time to a discussion of the state university bureaus which extend their service all over Wisconsin. He said that 99 per cent of the commencement speakers used by Wisconsin high schools and more than 80 per cent of all the lecture and lecture courses booked in the state are furnished by the state university's lecture and lecture bureau. Because the state pays all the overhead of the bureau it is possible to send talent to Wisconsin cities at about 50 per cent of the price which commercial booking agents are obliged to charge.

PACKAGE LIBRARY
Thousands upon thousands of package libraries are sent from the package library bureau to individuals and organizations all over the state and he said that the vast majority of papers which are read before various societies and groups in Wisconsin are prepared from material sent out by the bureau. Mr. Graf also discussed the benefits which county and municipal officers are able to obtain from the bureau of municipal research.

The bureau of formal study, Mr. Graf said, has charge of the correspondence courses. Opportunity is provided for study in almost every activity and he said thousands of students who never saw a university campus are obtaining university education.

Mr. Graf said Wisconsin was the first state university in the United States to establish a university extension division which became a model for all other institutions which adopted this system. He gave former president Charles Van Hise for initiating the work.

When Baby Swallows A Safety Pin

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

I SUPPOSE that most mothers know the things that are dangerous to little children and babies, but a reminder here may not be amiss. It is much better to guard against trouble than to "look the stable door after the horse is stolen."

To begin with, watch the toys you buy a little baby. Fortunately the manufacturers of baby toys have come to realize the necessity of making safe toys for very young children, and as a result we have the soft dolls with no paint or hair, or shoe-buttons or eyes to come out in exploratory months. Also there are the rubber or bathtub toys that are so attractive.

A bottle with a cork in it or an empty tube, can, or box with a removable top should not be made into a plaything. Also no small toy such as a whistle or balloon or any object that can be stuffed into its mouth.

A baby may swallow a penny or other small coin without any damage—even an ordinary pin need not cause hysteria in the family. They will very likely go through without causing any particular trouble.

But coins and pins should be kept absolutely out of his way.

An open safety pin is reason to get the nearest specialist at once.

In no case give him a laxative.

If a child swallows a pill or poison, try to make him vomit by giving him warm salt water in large quantities, or a teaspoonful of syrup of ipecac.

But get a doctor at once.

Try to keep hot dishes and irons away from him. More than one baby has been burned by pulling over a scalding tea-pot or coffee-pot at the table while sitting on his mother's knee—or catching at the cord of an electric iron, or pulling himself up to the stove where a kettle was boiling.

Now that fall approaches and fires must be lit, enough cannot be said about protecting both gas and coal fires by screens.

Don't allow children in flannellette nightgowns or sleeping-garments made of outing flannel to stand in front of an unprotected blaze. The fluff catches up like gun-powder if it gets near a flame. A child not apparently badly burned sometimes will die from the destruction of skin surface.

Screen time is not yet over. Screens corrode and at this time of year they get pretty rotten. A push will send them through. So watch little children playing near screened windows.

If the children are starting to school for the first time this fall, caution them about looking to both right and left before crossing.

Watch gas stoves and rubber tubing. Go over all the fixtures before lighting fires after the long months of disuse. Rubber tubing is always unsafe. Never turn a gas stove up too high, particularly when it is first lighted. You cannot smell deadly carbon-monoxide gas.

Cherry's baby, Hope, chuckled in her sleep and the sound awakened her. Her brown-velvet eyes, so like Faith's, flew wide, took in the satisfying fact that both her mother and her aunt were watching her adoringly, then winked half shut in a prodigious yawn.

"Let me take her," Faith pleaded. "It still doesn't seem fair that she had to be taken away from me. . . . You adorable midget!" she cried to the year-old-baby, kissing the rose-flushed cheeks. "It's odd that our children should look so much like us, isn't it, Cherry? Robin's as black-and-white as I am. I'm afraid he's going to grow up into a Dick Talbot type of heart-breaker. By the way, Crystal tells me that Tony Tarver's in rather a jam with the Talbot youngster. He asked her to marry him last Saturday night and she didn't accept or refuse, and the boy has been broadcasting the news of the engagement."

"Now Tony wants to get out of it, for some reason that isn't quite clear to me. The boy has money and family and is the handsomest young thing in town. Poor Crystal fell for him instantly, of course, and I gather that he hurt her rather cruelly by not even being decently polite to her. . . . Isn't it bottle time for Hope?"

"Don't worry," Cherry yawned her pretty little nose flaring to the fragrance of the flowers which a vagrant breeze had wafted from the garden. "Rhoda will appear with it right on the dot. But about Crystal's job? I put the man she works for. She'll be vamping him steadily from nine until five if he doesn't shoot her by ten o'clock the first morning."

"Please don't, Cherry," Faith begged. "You aren't fair to Crystal. She wants to be popular and is scared to death she won't be. That's her whole trouble. . . . Well, Tony Tarver found her wandering the

She Has Dressed Hair Of Four "First Ladies"

Mrs. Anna Leon . . . coiffed four First Ladies

BY MRS. ANNA LEON

WASHINGTON — To have dressed the hair of four First Ladies of the land, is I feel, an unique distinction. It is likewise extraordinary that all of them should have had unusually lovely hair. In these days when all of us live so strenuously, and many of us in large cities where the air is smoke and dust-filled, healthy and beautiful hair is the exception.

I went to the White House first to serve Mrs. Helen Taft. Her hair was dark brown, long and very thick. Her face was inclined to be thin, and I parted her hair softly waved rather high on the side, and knotted it loosely in the back.

A side part is much more generally becoming than a center part, and I believe most women enhance their appearance by waving the hair. The very young, or women whose features are almost perfect, can risk straight hair, but the others would do well to wave their hair slightly.

CHARM OF MATERNITY

Mrs. Ellen Wilson was one of the most charming women it has been my privilege to serve. I went regularly to the White House to dress streets in a terrible yellow and green outfit, whisked her home, dressed her up in a stunning ensemble of golden-brown and beige, and, I gather, gave her some surprisingly astute tips on how to land a job.

"Admirable!" Cherry applauded ironically, with a vicious little click at the end of the word. "Of course it's fine of her to pauperize Crystal, to give her ideas above her purse. But tell me about Crystal's job."

"Oddly enough, she's going to work for George Pruitt's father—old Mr. Lincoln Pruitt," Faith answered, a little coldly, her eyes averted from the spectacle of Cherry's jealousy of Tony Tarver. "An agency sent her. Crystal says she didn't realize at first that the old man was George's father, and that she didn't mention the fact that she had met George."

"You're still the most credulous soul in the world, darling," Cherry hooted.

"No, she didn't," Faith declared firmly. "But the luck comes through the fact that old Mr. Pruitt liked Crystal the minute he laid eyes on her—complimented her on not looking like these modern painted Jezebels, as he calls them."

"I love that!" Cherry laughed maliciously. "Crystal uses enough dogs to make-up the faces of the Ziegfeld chorus. But I suppose the paragon, Tony, had scrubbed Crystal's face for her and sent her out looking like a Salvation Nell in modern dress."

"Tony did just that," Faith agreed laughing in spite of her annoyance with her mercenary sister. "And now Crystal has to live up to the role of slightly old-fashioned girl during office hours."

ISOLATE CHILD WITH DISEASE FROM OTHERS

NOTHING irritates me more than to hear a mother say, "Smiths have the whooping cough, or the measles, but I'm not going to try to keep Johnny away because he has to have those children's diseases sometime and it may as well be now. The sooner the better."

Johnny doesn't need to have those diseases, and such a statement from any mother is ridiculous. It shows that she doesn't know that every illness Johnny has, serious or otherwise, takes away just a little bit more of Johnny's resistance, makes his organs just a little less efficient, corrodes his nerves and affects his senses, so that the sum total of Johnny's illnesses by the time he reaches manhood will spell his health capital and his life expectancy.

NEVER IS IMPROVED

He may seem to recover completely from the torturing days of high temperature, and various congestions, but anyone who argues that he is better for having had them, or inescapable, is merely doing a bit of guesswork without any foundation whatsoever.

I have heard people say that after typhoid fever, for instance, a certain person was fatter and better than ever. Yes, apparently, only to have ten or twenty years later a gall-bladder infection which really was a direct aftermath of the intestinal infection of the old disease.

But go back to children's diseases, such as whooping-cough, measles, mumps and all the others:

Parents not only should see that their own children are kept from other families who are infected, but from other children in their own households who are infected. If possible, the other children should be kept out of the house.

ISOLATE CONTAGION

If a child has whooping cough or any other contagious disease and is well enough to be out of doors, he should not be allowed to roam over the streets or in other people's yards or sit on steps with other children. He never should be taken to movies. A child with even a severe cold should not be allowed to mingle with other children. It may be only a cold for him, but the germ caught from him, incubating in a less healthy child, may develop into a head or lung infection that is really serious.

For instance, a sore throat may be incipient scarlet-fever. It may be so mild in a child that he is not even put to bed, and the unsuspecting parent may never guess that the innocent-seeming redness and slight indisposition that lasts for a day or two is really a case of streptococcus infection that may spread a serious case of scarlet-fever to another child. If children are sick, keep them themselves until they are better. Don't deliberately expose a child to any disease—and certainly not that curse of childhood, whooping-cough—because you think he'll get it anyway.

ent styles of coiffure would become her.

Up to about a year and a half ago, Mrs. Coolidge wore her hair, which is long and dark brown in color, with a suggestion of a side-part, and the ends knotted loosely in the back. Recently she has worn it in a soft wave, straight back from her forehead, a style peculiarly becoming to her.

Sometimes, like other customers, mistresses of the White House have their own ideas about how they want their hair dressed. Often however, they ask my advice, which I give to the best of my ability and judgment. For a First Lady should be first in all things—even in the matter of careful grooming.

This living room is extremely spacious for such a tiny nest. One end sports a deep fireplace nook, just the place for a young couple to enjoy winter evenings. The kitchen furnishes all these conveniences which are so invaluable in saving the young housewife's time and energy for other things.

There's a back and a side porch here too. And if more room is needed, an extra bedroom can be built, which will be convenient to the bathroom, opening off the little central hall.

FARMERS BUSY THIS WEEK THRESHING AND FILLING SILO

ALFALFA YIELD IN TOWN OF KAUKAUNA IS ABOVE AVERAGE

Second Cutting Results in Larger Crop, Although First Crop Was Good

BY W. F. WINSEY

Kaukauna—Farmers in the town of Kaukauna are either plowing, cutting their second crop of alfalfa, threshing, or getting ready for silo filling. Considerable plowing has already been done and most of the alfalfa has been cut. Quantities of alfalfa are still coming in the fields. Threshing from the shock has been completed and barn threshing is well under way and will be finished in a short time. Several farmers are filling their silos and the majority will be at it next week or the week after. The farmers of this town were very fortunate this season in saving their alfalfa fields from winterkilling. In harvesting a big yield of alfalfa the first cutting and a much larger yield the present cutting. Those who have done their fields of from 35 to 50 bushels to the acre and barley yields running from 30 to 45 bushels. While the corn in a large number of fields is the best ever raised in the town, some of the fields are light on account of being poorly drained, inadequately cultivated to keep down weeds, a lack of plant food or fertilizer in the soil on which a good crop of corn depends, or on late planting.

Among the farmers now or lately engaged in the above mentioned activities are John Sullivan, route 3, who threshed 356 bushels of barley Labor Day from ten acres, and 100 bushels of oats from the same number of acres. Sullivan was curing 10 acres of Hungarian grass, a variety of millet, that he uses as a substitute for corn in feeding cattle. He cures this grass in the same way that other hay is made and claims that it is excellent feed. He says that the grass does best in comparatively low land but needs warm soil and weather to produce a big crop. It is not much harder to cure than alfalfa. Mr. Sullivan's father began raising this kind of cattle feed 30 years ago and John has been continuing the practice ever since he began working the farm himself.

CUTS CORN EARLY

Peter Bolensens, route 3, is the first farmer in this vicinity to cut his corn crop preparatory to filling his silo. He completed the cutting of the field last Tuesday, and will fill his silo as soon as possible. He cut his corn early because it was badly knocked down and tangled by the storm, and he preferred to get the crop in the silo before frost, rain, and mud had a chance to make the process more difficult. His corn is a good crop and so is his second crop of alfalfa which he cut recently.

Albert Zittlow began cutting his crop of corn for the silo a week ago, on Thursday, with a crew of nine men and four teams began filling. The first silo, the one 14 feet by 33 feet, with a capacity of 160 tons of silage, and the other, 12 feet by 44 feet, with a capacity of 165 tons. He has 20 acres of very good corn. He began silo filling early as his corn, although a good crop, was badly knocked down by the storm. The work of the storm, however, compelled him to cut his corn one way. Although his corn is loaded with ears, he says it is not as ripe as it should be for the silos. Forty-five head of cattle and seven horses will get most of his silage.

John Van Wychen, route 3, has a seven acre field of mixed corn and sunflowers on his farm that is attracting considerable attention. The sunflowers tower high above the corn and are large and heavy. "On account of the great value of sunflowers as a feed for cattle and as a milk producer, it will not be many years before a large number of farmers in this vicinity will be planting sunflowers with their corn," said Mr. Van Wychen. "When sunflower and corn silage are mixed, the silage never spoils in the silo, cattle leave no silage in their mangers, and the owner of the cattle is relieved from the expensive necessity of buying oil meal to balance his cattle ration. Sunflowers are not only good milk producers and relished by cattle but they take the place of oil meal."

GROWS SUNFLOWER

This is the third year that Mr. Van Wychen has been raising sunflowers in his corn field. As a result of his experience, he says that the growers should plant a short variety as the sunflower nine feet tall is difficult to handle in silo filling. He expects to cut his crop of sunflowers and corn this week, and believe the product of his seven acre field will fill his silo, 14 feet by 40 feet.

Mr. Van Wychen plowed a seven acre field and threshed 200 bushels of barley last Tuesday from four acres, 110 bushels of oats from 20 acres.

He recently completed a machinery shed, 40 feet by 60 feet, on his farm. He is milking 10 cows.

Leo Schuch, threshed 500 bushels of oats and barley a week ago, and got a good yield and an excellent quality of grain. He has a large field of corn very well cared and beginning to dent, which promises a big yield. The corn was blown down in parts of the field by the recent storm and may be hard to cut for that reason. He expects to begin filling his silo in about two weeks.

Last Tuesday, William Rode, route 3, threshed 2,100 bushels of oats and barley on his farm. The yield and quality of the grain was very satisfactory. He is now cutting his second crop of alfalfa. He expects to begin cutting his first class corn crop this week. His hay crop was somewhat short, but he expects to have abundant feed for his farm animals. He is now milking 24 cows.

Mr. Rode is engaged in dairy farming on a large scale. Mrs. Rode is raising chickens as a side line and has been very successful. A stunk that visited her colony house one night last summer, however, put

Hog Cholera Decline Throws Farmers Off Guard, Sale Of Serum Indicates

Decline in sales of hog cholera serum is leading government authorities to fear that farmers are growing lax in the use of this preventive after several years of freedom from epidemics.

Washington—(AP)—The sharp decline in hog cholera losses since the 1925 epidemic apparently is leading government producers off guard against this ever present danger. Government observers have noted with some concern that the sales of cholera serum, the only known safeguard against the disease, have been dropping off. This indicates, they fear, that hog raisers, lulled by the period of relative freedom from the disease in their own and neighboring herds, have been falling back into a habit of taking chances by failing to inoculate their animals against the disease, and thereby have increased the danger of outbreaks.

Such a situation is greatly to be regretted, in the opinion of Dr. T. P. White, authority on the subject and assistant chief of the division of hog cholera control of the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture. Inoculation of hogs against the disease, he holds, should be a routine procedure in all communities where it has appeared and is likely to recur, the cost being looked upon as an insurance premium. This cost, amounting to $1.25 or $2.50 for a full grown hog, can be reduced to about a third of that sum, he says, by immunizing pigs in the suckling stage, when much less serum is required and they can be handled most easily and rapidly. Once successfully inoculated they are with few exceptions permanently immune to the disease, he explains, whereas, if they are allowed to be come infected, the likelihood of recovery is extremely slight, since no effective cure has been discovered.

While statistical studies of the disease indicate that no widespread epidemic is to be expected for some years, he warns that there is always danger of sporadic outbreaks, developing quickly and spreading rapidly. "The virus of the disease will remain alive in secluded places, such as underneath buildings and in runways, under old straw stacks and in filthy mud wallows, for a long time," he explains. When susceptible hogs come in contact with this infection they develop cholera. No one can predict at what time the malady may begin to spread. Past history shows that about every ten or 15 years there occurs a wave of unusual prevalence."

In addition to immunization, he emphasizes the value of maintaining sanitary conditions as another safeguard, since "a healthy, thrifty hog is more resistant to disease than an ill kept, undernourished one." Care should be taken, he suggests, to provide hogs with clean, occasionally disinfected shelter, good drinking water, food that is not likely to have come in contact with infected pork and protection against filthy wallows and runways, diseased animals, dogs that have fed on cholera carcasses and visitors whose shoes may be carrying the germs from another hog lot.

MONDOVI HIGH SCHOOL HIRES NEW AG TEACHER

Mondovi—Harry E. Hill, until recently a farm at Bolton, N. C., has been secured as Smith-Hughes teacher of agriculture in the local high school. He succeeds F. C. Clafin, who resigned to accept a position as county agent of Polk county, Wis., and was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1925. He is a former resident of Sheboygan Falls.

After witnessing the destruction wrought by the night prowler, she set a trap, hastily baited, and the following morning found the skunk in her trap.

August Reimer, route 3, threshed the best crop of oats and barley, Thursday, that he has raised in the past 10 years. His corn is very satisfactory but was flattened by the recent storm.

William Dool route 3, was threshing his crop of oats and barley Thursday, and both kinds of grain were running well and the quality was first class.

WHITE PINE BLISTER INVADES BARRON WOODS

Madison—(AP)—Because Barron, Wis., farmers did not heed the recommendation of the state department of agriculture to remove currant and gooseberry bushes from their forests they must pay the penalty of white pine blister rust infection according to the department's semi-monthly bulletin.

The infection was first discovered on two adjacent woodlots about two years ago. The department suggested at that time different methods which would probably aid in confining the rust to that particular spot or at least keep it from spreading to forests in that vicinity. Experts explained that infection cannot spread directly from tree to tree, but certain bushes act as a transmitter since they cover the distance between the trees.

PICKERS HARVEST LARGE BERRY CROP DESPITE BAD START

Later Rains and Hot Weather Produced Bumper Yield in This Territory

New London—The berry crop, early this year thought to be of small consequence, due to the extremely bad start during May's drought in Waupun and Outagamie counties, has resulted in a bumper crop of raspberries and blackberries. Blackberries were benefited by abundance of rain and hot weather. They have been plentiful and are still on the market, the price for the season averaging between 20 and 25 cents per quart. These berries, easily picked in the commercial gardener's rows where vines are not allowed to run riot, are said to be easily marketed and the demand is always good. Wild blackberries were of excellent quality and are still in great abundance. One woman from near the city related that in her home's time last week she picked about twelve quarts.

Apply this year are a bumper crop also, as may be seen on any trip about the country. Few orchards hereabouts are kept for commercial purposes, but where trees have been sprayed and branches kept pruned the fruit this year is of uniform fineness, for size and quality. Henry Vohel, route 2, Hortonville, has one of the best orchards in the county. Mr. Vohel understands the care of trees and the apples he raises run a large range in variety. He has one of the finest Talman Sweet trees in the country, this old favorite bearing year after year. Many of his trees are hanging so full with fruit that props have been used to support the branches.

The city dweller who enjoys picking his own grapes for swelling the home supply of jam will not fare badly this fall and he will probably be fortunate in finding wild plums also for it has been years since this fruit was so plentiful.

The first snapping frost will bring down a shower of hickory and butternuts and it will also bring out many "No-Trespass" signs, for the farmer of the community has learned that when frost brings down the nuts it also brings the motorist, who knows little and cares less about property rights as the farmer see them. However, the crop is a good one as nearly every nut tree is loaded.

According to local growers melons this year are only a comparatively good crop. Hot weather and warm rains being lacking during the growing month, the vines made slow growth. Jess Lathrop, for years has devoted considerable acreage to the crop will harvest only a small percentage of the melons of other years. Four acres of his farm on the county lines road have been disappointing, he states. Charles Learman, Liberty farmer, states that cold weather and heavy rains took heavy toll of his yield.

The temperature of milk used in making cottage cheese is one of the most important factors in producing cheese of good quality. For the best results the milk should be kept cool, at 50 degrees Fahrenheit, if possible, from the time it is obtained until it is made into cheese.

Here And There Among The Farmers--

BY W. F. WINSEY

Oscar Loos, route 3, began cutting 30 acres of very good corn on Thursday. He intends to fill a silo, 14 by 36 feet, and to shock and husk the balance of his corn for hog and cattle feed. From a 15 acre alfalfa field that was partially winterkilled, Mr. Loos got a great deal more hay from the second cutting than from the first. Since spring the stand had made a marvelous improvement. For pasture he is using sweet clover and the grass that has grown in the fields since the grain was removed. To supply him with pasture next summer, Mr. Loos has five acres of sweet clover.

Charles Rolf, route 3 began cutting his corn last Tuesday and was filling his silo Thursday. He has an excellent crop of corn this season that will supply all the silage he needs. He is pasturing his cattle on sweet clover and they are doing well on that kind of feed. His field of cucumbers produced a big yield.

Shiocton—E. A. Knoke, route 1, who has 15 acres of cauliflower, 50 acres of kraut cabbage and 80 acres of late cabbage, is now harvesting his early cabbage. To deliver the cabbage to the kraut factory, he is using two teams and two trucks. Except in wet spots in his fields his cabbage looks very thrifty, is quite free from disease, and the heads are of remarkably good size. Mr. Knoke has more acres of cabbage and more cabbage in sight than any other grower in this part of the state.

Madison—Honorary certificates for producing 300 pounds of butterfat will be awarded owners of 1,702 Wisconsin dairy herds at the National Dairy exposition, Memphis, Tenn., October 13-20. This list exceeds the number of 300-pound herds of last year by 296.

What is considered one of the most outstanding records ever reported to the national dairy club was made by the Holmen association, which operates in La Crosse county. All of the 31 herds entered in this club averaged at least 300 pounds. This is the only association in the state having 100

The Hilldale association is reporting 24 herds for national recognition, and the Cedarburg-Grafton 23. The Blue Lake Angus and Jersey clubs each have 22 herds. Entries of 21 herds were made by the Madison-Valley, Elkhart-Outagamie and Merton-Lisbon associations. The Denmark, Maiden Rock and Muskego-Vernon clubs were represented by 20 herds.

Three hundred eighty-two cows finished the month with an average production of 387 lbs. of milk or 22.7 lbs. of fat.

Big-- look at its massive new oversize

It's a bigger tire. The Miller Test Fleet after driving this tire thousands of miles past the life of average tires, reports that 30 to 40% of the tread is still there and that its traction qualities are as good as new. Size has much to do with this superlative performance. The tread is several pounds thicker—and cut deeper. The carcass is 6-ply, of course, with double layers of pure gum between the plies. You need never fear road delays from punctures. It was built expressly to withstand the destructive wear that today's driving and traffic conditions impose. And for those who drive fast and show their tires no mercy. It is not to be confused with any other tire built. It is a super-tire for super-service.

APPLETON BOWLING ALLEYS READY FOR OPENING OF SEASON

Keglers Get Started About Oct. 1; League Organization Underway

Runways Resurfaced and General Repairs Made by Alley Owners

Another week or ten days and Appleton bowlers will get out the old soft shoes, and start limbering up for the official opening of the 1928-29 bowling season. And when they start they'll find that owners of alleys throughout the city are preparing for their coming and have repaired alleys and made the runways as smooth as sanding and polish will permit.

Several leagues throughout the city already have started organization plans and are asking that names be submitted so teams can be drawn. Those who have not actually started organization work are beginning to think about the matter and will hold meetings within the next few days.

Bowlers who last year were members of the K. C. League already have been asked to submit their names to committee members if they wish to be placed on teams. Their season will open on Monday, Sept. 24. A meeting of the Elk club bowling committee is scheduled for Friday of this week and plans for that organization's league then will be formulated.

There will be few changes in alleys this year except that gutters have been lowered in many instances to conform with a new rule relating to their depth. Gutters now must be 3 1/2 inches deep.

The Elk club alleys will be opened to the public Sept. 24, according to reports and indications are that some league will have use of them every evening. The runways all have been resurfaced and polished and the gutters lowered. New kick-backs also have been put in.

At the Arcade alleys repairs still are being effected and the place will be opened to the public about Oct. 1.

The usual amount of resurfacing and polishing has been done there and a new stock of pins purchased.

The alleys in the Insurance building also will be opened to the public on the first of next month. General repair work has been completed and the alleys now are ready for use.

The alleys at the Y. M. C. A. also are in first class condition and will be opened about Oct. 1.

The Eagle League will get under way the first week in October with eight teams. Eagle alleys now are being put in condition for opening of the season. The runways are being resurfaced, new pins purchased and new backstops installed.

Hennessy loses in tennis tourney

New York Doctor Springs Surprises and Cops from Favorite

Forest Hills, N. Y. — (AP)—About half of the responsibility for keeping the national tennis singles championship from falling again into the hands of the French rested Tuesday on the brawny shoulders of Dr. George King of New York, 35 years old.

It was transferred there from the shoulders of Johnny Hennessey Monday when the doctor sprang a surprise and defeated the Indianapolis youth.

Having beaten Hennessey 7-5, 6-4, King Tuesday was a favorite to reach the semi-final round where his opponent undoubtedly will be Henri Cochet of France, the leading candidate for the title held by Rene Lacoste. King was matched Tuesday against Percy L. Kynaston, of Rockville, N. Y., and on form should meet and defeat Jacques Brugnon, the least formidable of the French "Musketeers" in the third round Wednesday.

In the first round reduction of the field from 64 to 32, the number of United States representatives was cut from 41 to 22, the French was seven to five, the English from four to one, the Australians from four to two, and the Japanese from two to one.

With Hennessey out, George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, his Davis cup teammate, and No. 2 seeded American, with King, who is not seeded, heads the United States hopes. Both Lott and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Texas, the former intercollegiate champion who is seeded at No. 3, triumphed over French opponents. Lott beating Pierre Landry, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1, and Allison defeating Paul De River, French junior champion, 6-3, 6-5, 6-8.

Cochet beat Tommy Wilmer, of Bridgeport, Conn., 6-2, 6-1. His second-round opponent was Junior Coen, of Kansas City.

EAGLES WANT BOWLERS TO MEET FRIDAY NIGHT

All members of the local series of Eagles interested in bowling have been asked to attend a meeting Friday night at the club at which time plans for the Eagle bowling league will be formulated and at least eight teams organized. Members of the bowling committee, however, are not averse to a 12 team league, depending on how many signify their intention of joining up. Handicap rules again will govern the games, the intention being to give new bowlers as much chance as the veterans.

The league probably will get under way the first week in October. Members of the committee in charge of bowling activities this year are Andrew Schiltz, Anton Lisch, Mike Ashauer, Richard Groth, Paul Manthey, August Frenzel and Elmer Koerner.

Young Corbett, the one-two-three, sells insurance on the side... his real name is Raffaela Giordina... he used to pick grapes in California before he got wise... and he hasn't lost a fight since January three years ago... even beat that negro Thompson, who smacked the welter champ a few days ago... Glenn Wright is on the outs at Bucktown... and they say he will get what Cuyler got... Tex Rickard can't see Robert... says there are 10 or 15 as good... and Pugazzy can't see any other... Knute Rockne says S. M. U. may surprise the Army... and those Atlanta scribes are warning the world, and Notre Dame in particular, about Georgia Tech... Brown has got all that stuff out of their necks that they had last year and which kept them from winning... Both the Army and Navy are gonna have cock team this fall... but won't play each other... MARANVILLE MAY GET INTO SERIES AFTER LONG WAIT

Took Part in First Championship Play When Youngster of 22 Years

BY BILLY EVANS

Fourteen years ago this month, George Stallings was leading his famous "miracle team," the Boston Braves, to a National League pennant and an ultimate world series championship.

While Stallings and his right bowler, Johnny Evers, were doubtless responsible for much of the success of the club's sensational achievement that year, no little amount of credit was due Rudolph, James and Tyler, the three pitching aces—and a 23-year-old youngster playing his second regular campaign with the team.

The 22-year-old chap was Rabbit Maranville, a peppery little shortstop out of the New England League. Maranville's stellar work aided, timely hitting and fighting spirit played big parts in the Braves' double triumph that season.

This year—fourteen campaigns later—we find this same Rabbit Maranville, now a 36-year-old veteran, playing a major role in the march of the St. Louis Cardinals to another probable pennant, and possible world series victory. For Maranville, picked up out of the major league gutter late last summer, has been the mainspring of the McKechnie machine. Inserted in the lineup this year in place of the disabled Tommy Thevenow, the Rabbit has come through in a sensational manner.

The case of Maranville is a strange one. Traded to the Pirates as far back as 1921 for three players who have long since faded from the big time landscape, and then swapped to the Cubs three years later, the Rabbit finally was considered through several years ago, and was cast aside.

No one wanted the ageing shortstop—no one, until McKechnie, pilot of the Cards, hard-pressed for a substitute for the crippled Thevenow, decided to give Maranville a trial while Tommy was getting back into shape. And the old star of the Boston Braves, given a new lease on major league life, not only proved a capable replacement, but has been one of the outstanding figures in the success of the Cards this season.

Should the St. Louis entry win the flag—and such a happening appears likely—Maranville will have the distinction of being the only player ever to get into a world series after a lapse of fourteen years. Stuffy McInnis was with the pennant-winning Athletics in 1911 and the flag-copping Pirates fourteen falls later, but Stuffy also appeared in three classics in between.

Of the players who participated in that 1914 series between the Braves and the Athletics, only five remain in active major league play. They are Maranville, Leslie Mann, now with the Giants, Herb Pennock, Yankee; Wally Schang, Browns, and Joe Bush, Athletics. And Bush has seen but little service this season.

RAIN FORCES H. S. GRIDDERS INDOORS

Shields Spends Two Hours Lecturing on Rules and Fundamentals of Game

The old saying is "make hay while the sun shines" by Coach Joseph Shields of Appleton high school can make hay while its raining. Monday afternoon while the heavens were dripping all over the huskies the coach took charge of his seniors for two hours and lectured them on fundamentals of good football playing. The work had to be done sometime, the coach said, and when it's raining out of doors, it's time for indoor work.

Football rules for the present season were gone over with the squad and the boys generally acquainted with what can and cannot be done on the gridiron during a game. Plays that Shields is thinking about also were explained to the men and a short session held with a select group later in the evening.

Tuesday night the gridders will be back on the Third ward field providing Jupe Pluvius does not force indoor work again.

ELK BOWLING COMMITTEE TO MEET FRIDAY NIGHT

The bowling committee of the Elk club will meet Friday evening to discuss organization of a permanent committee to take charge of bowling affairs this year and to make plans for the Elk league. The Elk league will bowl on Friday's this season, according to reports, and will be run on the same basis as last year. The season will officially open for the league on Sept. 23.

Members of the bowling committee are David Smith, chairman, Oscar Kunitz, Kurt Koletzke, Louis Keller, and Forrest Johnston.

And it's too bad they aren't big enough to play for their daddy as they have all the enthusiasm needed to make star football players.

BADGERS TO PLAY INTERSECTIONAL GAME, ON NOV. 3

Crimson Tide of Alabama to Perform on Camp Randall Gridiron

Madison — For the first time in many years Badger football fans will have an opportunity to witness an intersectional grid game on the home field, when Wisconsin meets Alabama at Camp Randall on Nov. 3.

Since Wallace Wade took over the duties of football, coach at the southern school, Alabama has taken a place in the gridiron sun unequaled by any other Dixie institution. The Crimson Tide rose to its greatest heights two years ago when the Wade 11 completed their schedule undefeated and played for the national collegiate title.

Last fall their team was reconstructed after the loss of many regular performers. Alabama's 1927 record was not quite as brilliant as the previous year, but she was not defeated once by more than a single touchdown. Advance reports from the Alabama camp at University, Ala. are far from pessimistic. Coach Wade will have a great crop of sophomores this year.

Glenn Thistlethwaite, who is still attempting to close a non-scouting pact for this north-south battle, is expecting to face a powerful outfit on Nov. 3. The Badger mentor has much respect for Wade's ability. The Crimson Tide has always had a smashing attack, and a very effective forward pass.

"DAD" VAIL AGAIN ILL; STEINHAEUER TAKES CREW

Madison, — Wisconsin may be forced to start fall crew practice without the services of the veteran coach, Harry "Dad" Vail. Athletic Director Little has just learned that the "old man," known well and highly throughout the rowing world, has again been taken seriously ill.

The message has indicated that Vail will be unable to meet the Wisconsin oarsmen when they turn out this month for fall practice. The illness is a recurrence of an attack that sent the Badger coach to the hospital last winter.

For fifteen years the name of Vail has been associated with crew at Wisconsin, and his loss this season would be a serious matter. Joe Steinhauer will probably take charge of the oarsmen for the time.

VON ELM LEADS IN QUALIFYING ROUND OF AMATEUR MEET

Bobby Jones Draws Up in Second Place With 77; Many High Scores

Newton, Mass. — (AP)—Start of the second 12 holes in the qualifying round of the national amateur golf championship Tuesday found some of the youngsters declaring that Brae Burn is not so tough as it looks.

Not all the veterans would agree. With the exception of George Von Elm all the former champions in the hunt for encores on the title found "t" the course had not been softened to any considerable extent.

Von Elm with a 73 was only one stroke over par for the first 18 holes but the scores of the other eight former champions ranged from the 77 of Bobby Jones, to the 91 scored by S. Davidson Herron. Francis Ouimet, Jess Sweetser and Max Marston had 78, Jesse Guilford, Chick Evans and William C. Fownes, Jr., scored 80.

George Voigt, started the second half of the 36 hole qualifying test tied with Harrison R. Johnston for the lead at 71. These sterling golfers were the only ones in the field of 143 to share par. C. Ross Somerville, amateur champion of Canada, equalled perfect figures—72.

The United States Golf association prepared an annual list of ten stars including the names of Jones, Von Elm, Ouimet, Sweetser, Frank Bolp, Evans, Johnston, Watts Gunn, Dr. O. F. Willing and Roland McKenzie, the first eight to be seeded if they survived the qualifying 36-holes.

Dip started his second round with a score of 78, Watts Gunn had 80, Dr. Willing had 83 and McKenzie was almost certainly eliminated with 88. In the second ten George Davidson was around in 75, Wright in 74, Homans in 77, Held and Stein in 78 and McCarthy in 79.

The concluding holes of qualifying tests over the medal play route Tuesday will pave the way for match play for 32 survivors, two eighteen holes Wednesday reducing the field to eight to play Thursday, leading to the semi-finals Friday and final Saturday, the play for the last three days of the week to be 36 holes.

BABE TALKS A BIT

When Babe Ruth opens his mouth and talks about things pertaining to baseball, others in the game sit up and think over carefully what the Babe says. They know the Babe knows what he is talking about.

The Babe was sitting in his room at a Washington hotel recently, waiting for some friends to call for him, when a New York newspaperman cornered him and managed to get the Babe to talking. And here are a few things the Babe said:

"My home run record? Say, I haven't been bothered with it. If I had kept after home runs I could have broken my record, but I can do more good to the team by making sure of a hit when it is needed. I can hit into left seven times out of ten and anything I hit there goes for two bags.

"I don't know but what I may break that record. I hit 17 last September and we've got better than 20 games to play yet and I only need 14.

"But I'm not thinking about it. I want to play in another world series because I want to play in 10 if I have to play until I'm eighty. I've been in nine already."

SURE, HE LIKES YANKS

The Babe was asked if he thought the Yankees would win.

"I think we'll win," he replied.

"And what about the Pirates?"

"Well, I don't think so. They're too far behind."

TOOK NO CHANCE

The Babe has a watch he has been wearing for years. And there's a funny yarn, the way he tells it, about that watch.

"I got this thing in Hartford one day," he says. "We were playing an exhibition there and a guy at a jewelry company put it up for the first guy to hit a home run. So I hit one in the first inning and got the watch—haw, haw, haw."

"Gehrig had batted ahead of me and he struck out. It's a nice watch, isn't it?"

WELL, WELL!

The Georgia court of appeals handed down a decision a few days ago which is interesting, and which would have been more interesting if handed down several years ago when the act on which the suit was based was more common than it is now.

The Georgia court held that when a baseball player feels so inclined he may invade the stands and "mix it" with an offending fan without his club standing the chance of losing a damage suit.

The decision came when a fan sued Hollis McLaughlin, an Atlanta pitcher, because he climbed in the stands after the pitcher had razed him. The fan wanted 20 grand damages. But the court laughed his suit off.

SIX MORE QUALIFY AS MACHINE GUNNERS

Five members of Co. D, 127th Infantry, and one reserve officer fired machine gun qualification tests at the company range northwest of the city Sunday morning. Pvt. James Kerrigan qualified as a machine gun expert. Lieut. Omar K. Graef, a reserve officer, qualified as a first class gunner together with Sergeants Joseph Kerrigan, Lawrence Kempf, and Privates Max Buell and John Kerrigan of Co. D. About 23 members of the company now have qualified for ratings as machine gunners.

GIANTS BEGIN BIG SERIES WITH BRAVES BY TAKING 2 GAMES

McGraw Clan Now Only Three Games Behind St. Louis Cardinals

In the excitement over Connie Mack's bold bid for the American league pennant, the desperate battle being waged in John Heydler's circuit has been somewhat overlooked for the past week or so.

While the Athletics and the Yankees had an off-day Monday before resuming their series, the Giants inaugurated a four-day eight-game series at Boston by taking both ends of a double-header with the Braves.

This double victory, combined with defeats for St. Louis and Chicago, left the Giants only a single point back of the Cubs and but three games from the league-leading Cardinals.

Notwithstanding the story the standings tell, the Giants are face to face with virtual elimination from the race. With the task of playing three more double-headers with the Braves in as many days.

Brooklyn and Philadelphia divided a double header. The Phils took the opener, 11 to 6, and the Robins the second 7 to 2.

The American league was featured by the Chicago White Sox triumph over Detroit, 6 to 4, their ninth victory in their last ten games. Sox errors helped the Tigers to their tales.

Washington ended its home season by losing to the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 2.

Blacholder was given excellent support and St. Louis defeated Cleveland, 5 to 3.

Fred Fitzsimmons scattered the Braves' seven hits in the opener and won, 4 to 1. Joe Genewich allowed only three hits in the nightcap and the Giants won 11 to 0.

The Cardinals bowed to the Cincinnati Reds, 7-2, but kept intact their two and a half game lead over the Cubs who lost to the Pirates, 7 to 5.

The Reds pounded Flint Rhem and Sylvester Johnson for 11 hits and seven runs, giving them 174 for the season, tying the National league record set by the Chicago Cubs two years ago.

NEW HELIUM FIELD SHIFTS CENTER OF U. S. OPERATIONS

New Government Plant for Separating Helium from Gas Will Cover 18 Acres

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—The American helium center remains in Texas, but it has been moved from Fort Worth to Amarillo.

The government's new helium production plant is now being constructed just outside Amarillo and will soon be completed. The plant site covers more than 18 acres.

Here the helium will be separated from the natural helium-bearing gas piped down from the Amarillo company in a pipe-line now being constructed, to be used in the lighter than air ships of the Army and Navy, all of which are now lifted by helium.

Helium, it may be well to recall, is one of those rare inert gases which do not burn. It has no affinity with anything else and though some chemists believe they have made it combine with other things—such as platinum and bismuth—government scientists will not be convinced until after further investigation.

Helium has only 92 per cent of the lifting power of hydrogen, but the government long ago decided that this sacrifice in lifting power was more than compensated by the fact that hydrogen was dangerously inflammable.

The helium plant at Fort Worth is being abandoned only because the old Petrolia pool a hundred miles away, which has heretofore supplied it with helium, has begun to peter out. The pool was seven years old when the government first began to take helium from it.

The Bureau of Mines, which has supervision over the government helium projects, investigated various sources of helium, testing samples of natural gas from over a wide area. It found that by far the best source was at Amarillo.

This source, according to officials of the bureau, ought to provide enough helium for "quite a few years." Such supplies are very rare, however, and there is no promise that the helium in this country will last indefinitely.

Besides the Petrolia and Amarillo sources, there is only one other important one known in the United States. It has been found in natural gas in Canada, but in very small percentages.

The government helium project was begun in 1917 and two plants were opened in Fort Worth, with a pipe-line carrying the gas all the way.

The new structures at Amarillo will be substantial and adapted for future expansion at lowest possible cost, according to the Bureau of Mines. The more important parts of the equipment will be housed in steel framed buildings.

The mechanical equipment of the plant for separating the helium will consist principally of gas engines, gas compressors and apparatus for low temperature liquefaction. Spare units are to be moved in from Fort Worth.

Since the contract between the government and the Amarillo Oil Company was executed, further indications of a large helium supply have been found. A gas well which extends the proved gas area of the land previously contemplated has been completed. It came in with an open flow volume of 7,100,000 cubic feet a day and a rock pressure of 725 pounds to the square inch, with a helium content equal to that of the other wells. Another well is now being drilled.

WISCONSIN-AVE PAVING JOB NEARS COMPLETION

Employees of the F. P. Coughlin company, contractors laying the Wisconsin-ave pavement, have completed the entire street as far as N. Lave-st. The remaining block will be laid as soon as weather permits. Pavement was first laid on the north half of the thoroughfare and has been opened to travel by persons living on that side of the street for several days. Three intersections of Wisconsin-ave with other streets also have been completed for several days and have been opened to traffic bound for the north section of the city. When the Wisconsin-ave project is completed the contractors will start work on the retaining wall on W. Water-st and the paving on W. and E. Water-sts.

STAGE And SCREEN

GILBERT GREAT ACTOR, LOVER
"Four Walls," John Gilbert's starring picture, which opened yesterday at Fischers Appleton Theatre, is the star's answer to any assertions that a great lover on the screen need not necessarily be a great actor.

In this picture Gilbert is both a great actor and a great lover. The picture is, without question, the best piece of dramatic acting Gilbert has done on the screen. At the same time it contains a sufficient number of real honest-to-goodness love scenes to satisfy the most exacting of the Gilbert fans.

Gilbert has always said that the picture which pleased him the most was "Man, Woman and Sin," the story of the young boy who grew up and achieves experience in the Washington newspaper world. It is safe to assert that the characterization of Benny Horowitz, gangster, potential killer, lover and would-be reformer, is the most true to life character Gilbert has yet brought to the screen. It is equally safe to assert that the new picture will please both Gilbert and the Gilbert fans to a greater extent.

"Four Walls" is the story of a gangster leader in the East Side of New York City. Because he shoots a man in a cafe brawl he is "sent up the river" for four years. When he gets out he is resolved to go straight. He finds that his lieutenant has stolen both his position as head of the gang and his girl. The girl tries to get Gilbert back and he turns her down. From then on the picture is a story of the struggle of Gilbert to stay on the straight and narrow path and to keep away from the girl. The whirlwind finish to the story adds thrill to the excellent and novel plot situation.

John Crawford does the best work she has yet brought to the screen as the leading lady, and William Nick did an excellent job as the director.

"STREET ANGEL"

Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, fast-rising young screen stars, came to the Elite Theatre last night in their new Fox Films offering, "Street Angel," beginning an engagement of 5 days. It proved to be a masterpiece of beauty, charmingly acted and perfectly directed by Frank Borzage, who also made that other memorable Gaynor-Farrell picture, "7th Heaven."

The story is laid against the colorful background of Naples and the beautiful, soft-toned photographic treatment of the many picturesque scenes is a conspicuous contribution to the art of the motion picture.

Mass Gaynor, as a little waif of the Neapolitan waterfront and Farrell as a vagabond artist who meets and falls in love with her, handle their roles with superb skill and their many love scenes together held the audience enthralled.

It recounts the story of Angelina's desperate attempt to raise funds for her dying mother by taking to the streets, for which she is arrested and sentenced to prison. She escapes from the police and joins a small, traveling circus in which she becomes a ballet performer. Here she meets

Gino, the wandering painter, but their romance is shattered by the police who track her down and take her away to prison. However, they are finally reunited and made happy again.

"Street Angel" is a picture that ranks with the best of all time.

Our Presidents

Trouble with England and Napoleon continued into the administration of James Madison, who, like Jefferson, was a Virginian. England had stopped many American ships and taken off sailors, claiming that they were British subjects. War at length was declared against Great Britain, June 19, 1812.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge. Copyright 1923-26.

The American navy was small but good and the ships were fast. Several British ships were defeated.

Our attempts to invade Canada were not successful though Toronto was burned. The British burned public buildings in Washington.

In a battle at New Orleans, January 8, 1815, Andrew Jackson, with an army of backwoodsmen, defeated a force of British regulars. Peace had been declared by the treaty of Ghent, December 24, 1814, but there were no cables or fast steamships then, and word was slow in reaching this country.

UNITED ACTION BY WOMEN CAN END WAR MRS. HOOPER URGES

Speaker at New London Tells Audience How to Avoid World Conflicts

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—"No woman capable of raising a family need hesitate to do her part in bringing war to an end or fail to understand international affairs. It will never enter into another war it will be over before we care to fight, because we shut our eyes to facts and refuse to think and act together." These were the words of Mrs. Jesse J. Hooper, past legislative chairman of the International relations of the Federated Women's Clubs of America, speaking before Civic Improvement league members and their friends at the city hall on Monday evening.

"If there were no martial music, no uniforms, no flags, no drums, no war, the world would be a different place. And when we realize that every war in the long history of time has been begun, not by the youth of the land, but by small groups that never do any of the fighting, it is time that we assembled our strength for the ultimate and final ending of stupid slaughtering of the youth of the world."

As a means to abolish war Mrs. Hooper pointed to the need for constructive legislation. She explained the problems and progress made by the international peace conference, and asked that women everywhere, and together asking our senate to ratify the Kellogg treaty. It takes only a majority of the senate vote to declare war, she said, but it takes a two-thirds vote to bring about peace, and this is tragic. Many treaties are ruined by unwise reservations by the senate, and some have been so mutilated that they could not be presented.

"CIVILIZATION THREATENED"
"War will continue until we decide that it is too expensive and too stupid. Europe was plunged into wreck by the last war and today we are the only country not bankrupt. Can we continue to prosper with the rest of the world in debt? We manufacture 25 per cent of the world's goods, 32 per cent of its food. We cannot live without the good will of the world, for the world is our market place. No more can we give ourselves from being dragged into the first war begun between any of the countries of the world, and in another war, with modern inventions advanced over those of the world war, civilization will be wiped out."

"Our only hope lies in sane arbitration, in conference and in a constant, unwavering strength of the women of the world backed against the unthinking legislation. We must first work together to crystallize the opinions of every woman everywhere toward one great point, the ending of warfare and we must make our opinion count in Washington. Nothing is too great for us to accomplish, for we are America's women. We are the mothers of men. Let no man of the future cause to be written words like these found on the fields of France, 'Be careful you refused to think we are lying here.'" ey, and is one which interests all voters, the speaker explained. The itinerary of the debate team, which is composed of some of the ablest speakers from the university shows how popular the venture has become, and the plan is said to be similar to that introduced at Harvard some time ago.

The advance agent, working with a member of the society sponsoring the plan, solicits the business houses to secure a sale of the first 100 tickets. This amount takes care of the expense account of the team. All advertising and a further lot of tickets in stamped envelopes are sent to the society to be sent out to prospective buyers. Money from sale of these tickets is divided between the debating club and the society. Any amount raised beyond this sum goes to the sponsoring organization.

Mr. McFarland stated that in a great many cases the feature is put on by church societies and the theories put forth are presented in an absolutely unbiased manner, with nothing stated on either side which might possibly offend partisans of either platform. Such questions as: Why are farm leaders against Hoover? Is Al Smith, a product of the East side, capable of coping with the farm question? What is Smith's attitude toward the St. Lawrence railway? and What is Hoover's stand on the farm question?—are a few of the points which the debaters attempt to make clear.

The event will probably be held at the city hall, or should the sale of tickets warrant the step, the Congregational church may be secured for the evening.

No smoke or soot, and more heat in Ford Coke

Product of the Ford Motor Company

Now is the time to prepare for cold weather. When the first cool snap comes, your dealer may have so many orders for "immediate" delivery that he can't take care of all of them promptly. Somebody will have to shiver. Make sure it is not you and your family. Buy your winter fuel now.

Ford Coke is the fuel to buy. No smoke. No soot. No clinkers if you use ordinary care. Needs attention but twice a day. Plenty of heat, responsive to control. Ford Coke is practically all heat, in fact. When you buy fuel you pay for weight, but heat is what you want. And that's what you get in Ford Coke.

Ford Coke is made by the Ford Motor Company in its own coke ovens, from coal mined in Ford-owned mines. It is used by the Ford Motor Company. There is your assurance that the quality is both high and uniform. You can depend on it. For the Ford Motor Company cannot tolerate fuel of inferior or varying quality. That's the fuel to keep your home comfortable this winter. And the cost is very economical. Order from the nearest dealer now.

CIVIC GROUP WILL ASK CITY COUNCIL FOR SOCIAL WORKER

Secretary Is Instructed to Compile Data Showing Need of New Officer

Methods of approaching the city council on the need for a trained social case worker here were discussed by members of the Civic Council at a meeting Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. Members of the council believe that while the city council has been approached several times on the matter, the aldermen have taken a passive attitude on the subject, which explains their failure to take any action.

The fact that the city budget will be made up soon has prompted the Civic Council to renewed action in their request for $3,000 for the social worker. The result of the meeting Monday was that the secretary of the committee in charge of the welfare program, Mrs. S. C. Shauhan, was instructed to compile data to be presented to organizations represented on the council and have the groups discuss the need for a social worker.

A scrap book containing newspaper clippings and photographs of the civilities at various city playgrounds this summer was submitted to the council members by A. C. Denry, director of the grounds, and Harry Sylvester, chairman in charge of the playground committee. Mr. Denry also submitted a written report for the club.

A resolution was adopted putting the civic council on record as favoring another appropriation of $3,000 from the city council for the playground program for next year.

CAR THIEVES NABBED HERE SENT TO PRISON

regized them, when the officers knocked at the door of their room at the hotel and placed them under arrest. Krueger admitted the car, and because he had then $200 for taking him. Brysch claims to be a cook.

Acting on a tip chief Prin Sunday started an investigation which uncovered a description of Krueger and the car he was driving. The chief had just finished telephoning the description to the police station when Krueger drove by the building and Officer Arndt recognized the car and the occupant. He gave chase with Officer Delgen and Krueger was arrested on W. College-ave.

First he denied any knowledge of the two stolen cars which were sold to a local man but later he admitted selling them for $300 and $325. The Chrysler roadster netted him $300 and the coupe $325 he said. One of the cars had been retained by the Appleton man and the other had been sold. The name of the owner of one of the cars had been forged to a certificate transfer.

Krueger claimed he bought the cars from a man named Charles Kalon in Detroit and that he didn't know they were stolen. Investigation showed that one of the machines had been taken from the Yellow Drive-It-Yourself company at Detroit and the other from a man named C. H. Kalons, of Detroit.

The two Detroit cars will be turned over to authorities there and the New York car will be sent back to that city.

Schlichting and Krueger told the chief they had pushed the car from the garage at Jergson's residence in New York about midnight last Tuesday and started on their trip west picking up Brysch in Hoboken.

That Krueger was the disposing agent for a gang of professional thieves is the theory of Chief Prin. Krueger said Monday that it was well known among the men with whom he traveled that "hot" cars could be disposed of in New London. He said that they had had information that the New London clearing house had been wiped out by authorities.

Krueger was married three months ago to a girl in Upper Sandusky, Ohio, and on his way west stopped there to visit her.

JUDGE FINES MAN $10 FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

Robert Prellwitz, Edgar, Wis., was fined $10 and costs by Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court Tuesday morning after he was found guilty of reckless driving. Prellwitz was arrested on Highway 10 in the town of Greenville Sunday afternoon by Peter J. Blanshan, county motorcycle officer, who charged his car was zig-zagging across the road in a manner that menaced other machines. Prellwitz had been confined to the county jail since his arrest.

Glen Polzin, Marion, Wis., and a man from Chicago, whose name was not learned, lost deposits of $920 when the judge imposed fines of $5 and costs against them. They did not appear in court but Officer Blanshan was there with the deposits and the judge ruled that non-appearance was evidence of guilt and he ordered the money to be paid to the court reporter.

A charge of driving a car without a license against Henry Peters, Fremont, was dismissed when Peters showed he had just purchased the car. He had been arrested Sunday by Officer Blanshan.

TRAFFIC GROUP OF COMMERCE CHAMBER TO MEET TUESDAY

Division Hopes to Lay Out Program for Fall and Winter Activities

A meeting of the traffic division of the chamber of commerce will be held at 7:30 Tuesday evening in the chamber offices, according to P. C. Wesco, chairman. The purpose of the meeting is to lay out a program of fall and winter activities and attempts to acquaint more chamber members with the benefits which can be derived from the organization.

Members of the division also will discuss the reopening of the case of local manufacturers and merchants who are attempting to get more equitable freight rates for shippers here. Roy G. Wort, traffic manager of the chamber of commerce, was in Madison Tuesday gathering data on the case.

"Members of the traffic division feel there is a lack of understanding on the part of Appleton businessmen of the benefits coming from the traffic division," Mr. Wesco said recently, "and therefore have failed to cooperate in the division's work. An attempt will be made this fall to acquaint these groups with the workings of the division and show how money can be saved for them."

"The benefits of the traffic division can best be shown by the case of a local retail store which saved 31 percent of its annual freight bill by working with the chamber. Auditing of freight bills, proper routing of shipments and proper labeling and classification of freight, comparatively minor items, saved the company more than $500."

A special invitation has been extended to numerous members of the chamber of commerce to attend the meeting. Most of the group are those who have failed so far to make most use of the advantages of the chamber of commerce and the traffic division.

RACKETEERING NEW "BIG BUSINESS" OF ORGANIZED CRIME

Guns and Bombs Are Force
Which Collects Millions
Yearly in Big Cities

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of eight daily articles by James P. Kirby, special writer for The Post-Crescent and NEA Service, on the alarming growth of "racketeering." Kirby, a trained investigator and author of textbooks on criminology, has personally investigated the conditions of which he writes.)

BY JAMES P. KIRBY
Chicago—Racketeering is now Big Business.

"The Racket,"—organized graft, corruption and crime—has grown to proportions that seem magnified beyond imagination.

In Chicago alone—the birthplace of the "racket"—the receipts of these organized gangsters are from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 annually, it is conservatively estimated by those who have made an extensive study of crime conditions here.

In addition to garnering huge profits from bootlegging, gambling and

What "racket" is and how it works in big U. S. cities

Chicago dictionaries, as well as Mayor Thompson's American histories, need revision, if you are to understand the slang of the racketeer.

What is a racket? It is the name applied to the activities of Chicago gangs in bootlegging, gambling and vice and in collecting tribute from business and professional men for protection against bombings, other destruction of property and worse forms of violence.

A "mob" is a gang of racketeers usually composed of gunmen and criminals.

"Muscling" is the picturesque term describing the encroachment of one racketeer on the agreed "preserve" of another. "Big Tim" Murphy was said to have been killed because he tried to "muscle in" on another racket.

A "muscleman" is the gangster who does the heavy work, including shooting, knifing and bombing. His most frequently used muscles are those of his trigger finger and his bomb-throwing arm.

A "racketeer" is a man engaged in racket activities. The word is apparently derived like "profiteer," the "racketeer" being a man who reaps big profits through crime.

vice, racketeers now either control or are active in 50 larger and 150 smaller lines of business and other activity in Chicago and collect an enormous tribute for protection from their own violence.

For years, the "racket" has been distinctively a Chicago institution. But it has been found such a profit-

He Leads Chicago "Mob"

The "Scarface Al" Capone mob is the most powerful of the 15 mobs in Chicago. The degree of its organization is amazing, including a board of directors, etc., over which Al rules supreme. The Capone mob controls the beer privileges of Chicago and no one may operate within the loop without their approval.

ble form of crime there that it is spreading to the other large cities of the middle west. St. Louis, Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, heretofore complacent in their disdain of Chicago's terrorism, are awakening to find an invasion of racketeering with the accepted weapons—dynamite, stench bombs, the torch and machine guns.

VIOLENCE FOR SKILL
Racketeering is now organized much after the fashion of big business concerns, with violence substituted for business skill. No longer can it be considered the sporadic outbreaks of small groups of criminals.

It has found that greater returns can be obtained from organization and concerted action. It has found that it is much safer and more profitable to form rackets than it is to plan big mail or bank robberies; in this kind of crime there is a chance for one big hold-up occasionally, while in the racket game the "divdends" so far have been paid with amazing regularity.

In Chicago, there is a large number of "mobs," as the gangs of racketeers are now called. At the head of each mob is an acknowledged and undisputed leader. These leaders apparently have reached agreements to divide up the forms of graft and tribute and collections. For instance, Al Capone, the outstanding racketeer, controls the beer trade and is said to direct all the rackets in the loop—Chicago's principal business section. Other "mob" leaders have other districts and indulge in other forms of racketeering. The rather frequent outbreaks of gang warfare generally can be traced to some violation or suspected violation of these agreements.

Then like legitimate business the racketeers have bit upon the plan of extending their activities in order to increase their already fabulous profits. Gangsters trained in Chigo methods are sent to other large cities to organize rackets and in St. Louis, Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh are unmistakable signs of the guiding hands of the lords of the Chicago racket.

The men at the head of the rackets, although willing to approve of almost any kind of crime to achieve their ends, are not ordinary criminals. They are extremely shrewd and skillful, with a genius for organization. If they had engaged in legitimate business, the chances are that they would have been equally successful.

CRIME ALLIANCES
How can such organizations be built up in any American city? The answer, the various agencies investigating crime in Chicago agree, is that the racketeers have formed alliances with public officials and politicians and thus, until recently, have thwarted all efforts to prosecute them. The extent of the invasion of other large cities clearly depends on the real attitude of public officials.

Racket mobs in Chicago now control practically all the bootlegging, gambling and vice, but in addition have extended their domination to many forms of legitimate business. The stunt of the racket is to increase or keep up prices in any line of business and for this service (for which the public must pay) extort enormous sums from business men. Defiance of the racket generally brings violence.

This kind of a racket started in the dry cleaning industry, with the public and the dry cleaners being taken for a "cleaning." It has spread to these lines of business, according to special assistant attorneys general, now investigating the situation.

Garages, bootblacks, shoe repairers, candy manufacturers, fruit, vegetable and food dealers, laundries, meat, fish and poultry dealers, ash and manure hauling contractors, apartment house janitors, auto trades barbers, beauty parlors, butter and cheese stores, some dentists and doctors, excavating contractors, drug stores, glazing contractors, junk dealers, photographers, plumbers, restaurants, roofing contractors, street paving contractors, waste paper dealers, soda water manufacturers, delicatessens, florists and others.

PROSECUTION FAILS
This is but a partial list of professions, business and industries which in Chicago are the victims of the racket and while the prosecuting machinery of America's second largest city remains inert, the racket collects its millions each year.

It was because of this condition that Morris Becker, for 42 years prominent in the cleaning and dyeing industry of Chicago observing the menace of the racket which threatened to destroy his business through its bombings, burning of his trucks,

ERECT ARTERIAL SIGNS ON RIVER AND LAKE STS

Arterial stop signs halting traffic on E. South River-st at S. Lawest will be erected at the intersection of those two streets as the result of adoption by the common council this week of a resolution introduced by Alderman R. F. McGillan, Fourth ward.

The need of bringing traffic to a dynamiting of his plant through concealed sticks of dynamite in clothing sent in, etc., reorganized his business, taking in as a partner none other than "Scarface Al" Capone, with the declaration:

"I have no need of the state's attorney, police department or the Employers' Association. I have the best protection in the world."

Since that day Becker has experienced no trouble.

TOMORROW: Chicago murders and gang warfare.

stop at that intersection has become more apparent since construction of the new gymnasium at Lawrence college got under way, it was reported. Many trucks are continually going to and from the gymnasium by way of E. South River-st, and the intersection has consequently become more dangerous, especially in view of the fact that traffic on the latter street is scarcely visible from the S. Lawest. The presence of the hill on S. Lawest also adds to the danger at the crossing.

Hot weather, with the resulting dry roads, has been known to reduce the life of an auto tire by nearly half.
